Point Park University welcomes three new members to Board of Trustees

PITTSBURGH, PA – Three prominent members of the Western Pennsylvania business community have been elected to Point Park University’s Board of Trustees. They will begin their three-year terms in July.

Donald Jenkins, a cofounder of Main Street Capital Holdings, graduated from Point Park University in 1970 with a bachelor’s degree in accounting. He has more than 40 years of experience in acquisitions, leveraged buyouts, venture capital, investment partnerships, corporate finance, strategic and financial planning, and accounting. He previously served two terms on the Board of Trustees, including time as Vice Chair of the Board.

Jeffrey E. Cohen, president and CEO of Weiss Provision Co., graduated from Point Park in 1979 with a bachelor’s degree in business management. He is involved in all aspects of the daily business, including finance and marketing, at Weiss, which operates the Smallman Street Deli. He also spent 15 years as a sales executive with major shoe brands such as Nike, Stride Rite and U.S. Shoe Corp.

Louis DiNardo is a director in the Pittsburgh State and Local Tax Group at PricewaterhouseCoopers. He has experience in all areas of income tax, including restructuring, appeals, compliance, transactional analysis, refund review and tax accounting/provision review. His mother, Claudia DiNardo, is a 1972 graduate of Point Park.

“Point Park University is fortunate to have a dedicated Board of Trustees filled with members who are leaders in their professional fields,” said Paul Hennigan, president of Point Park. “Our three new trustees will be valuable additions to a board that remains focused on academic excellence, a quality student experience, community engagement and managed resources.”
